Let's BLAST it. Let's for once not look for outcome. Let's break the conventional boundaries and enter into a field which might not pay us even a penny. As bioinformaticists and Bioinformaticians, we have always believed in going to CINEMA and having a BLAST.

After an initial three months of content planning, design and fretting over, we finally said it. It all started with a summer internship in Kolkata – that part of India whose serenity and natural beauty is a reward to any eye.

We assembled and decided that we should establish a much needed news source of bioinformatics ourselves. If we can not do it ourselves, no one can do it. Science reporting is a very difficult business and nobody would dare to enter it if we didn't.

That was the birth of Bioinformatics Review. We have come up with an excellent and credible team to ensure contents are all interesting, we will make sure that we keep you up to date with latest developments taking place in Bioinformatics.

It all started with a dream and You are the most important asset that we can have. Join us, contribute to Bioinformatics Review, Share it and spread the spirit! Last Updated – Oct 21, 2015
